Seminar

Did We Tame the Beast?
Some Thoughts on the US Financial Reforms

Professor Lawrence Baxter

*Professor of the Practice of Law
Duke University*

Wednesday, 7 July 2010, 1:00 – 2:00 pm
Room TS403, 4/F T T Tsui Building, University of Hong Kong

The financial reform legislation in the United States will likely receive Presidential signature on or by July 4th. Prof. Lawrence Baxter will provide an overview of the key elements of these reforms and some critical commentary on their possible shortcomings. The audience will be invited to reflect on the likely impact of these reforms on the Asian financial industry.

Professor Lawrence Baxter is a Professor of the Practice of Law at Duke University. After some years as a tenured professor at Duke Law, Professor Baxter entered the corporate world as a strategist and, subsequently, a divisional executive for Wachovia Corporation. He retired in 2006 after more than a decade in the financial services industry and consulted in the entrepreneurial world until 2008, and returned to Duke Law at the beginning of 2009 to focus on teaching in the realm of financial services, domestic and international banking regulation and regulatory reform. Professor Baxter has taught, lectured and published widely in the fields of business, financial regulation, administrative law and other areas of public law. He blogs at www.theParetoCommons.com.
