Lapman Lee

Managing Director, Duff & Phelps Compliance & Regulatory Consulting

Wednesday, 7 June 2017

12:30 - 1:30 pm

Academic Conference Room, 11/F Cheng Yu Tung Tower
The University of Hong Kong

A bird's-eye view of the impact of emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence, blockchain and smart contracts, cloud and new computing technologies, and the widespread embedding of linked sensors (“Internet of Things”) on the key stakeholders in the Hong Kong insurance industry and how key players in the InsurTech ecosystem – i.e. customers, incumbent insurers, investors, financial services regulators, start-ups and talent (financial, technology, entrepreneurial) can contribute to develop Hong Kong into the InsurTech hub for Asia.

Lapman Lee is a Managing Director at Duff & Phelps, where he leads the regulatory consulting practice in Hong Kong. He has advised financial services clients on governance, risk and controls (GRC) related to conduct and prudential regulation for the past eighteen years in Europe/ U.K. and in Hong Kong. In Hong Kong, Lapman is an advisor and member of the Future Task Force of the Insurance Authority, a member of the Financial Markets Committee of the British Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Financial Services Business Council of the European Chamber of Commerce, where he co-authored a Hong Kong FinTech positioning paper for the European Commission.
